

Community Management - Software & IT (f/m/d)

To strategically advance our network, we are looking for a dedicated individual to join us immediately as a Community Manager for the fields of Software & IT. At SiliconSaxony, you can expect a highly innovative and interdisciplinary environment, short decision-making paths, and the opportunity to place your own ideas with lasting impact.

Your Role and Impact

As a Community Manager, you will be responsible for expanding and further developing our Software division. You will create spaces for exchange, initiate collaborations, and ensure transparency regarding relevant topics, stakeholders, and services of the association for our member companies. You will act as a central interface between member companies, partners, and internal teams, and strategically develop our community ecosystem.

Your Responsibilities

- Strategic development of the Software & IT fields
Responsibility for the conceptual and structural design of the division as well as its positioning within the overall ecosystem
- Networking & Collaboration
Active moderation and initiation of exchange formats (working groups, projects, dialogue formats) to specifically foster cooperation among members

- Central point of contact for members and partners
Advising on network offerings, identifying needs, and providing impulses for new formats and initiatives
- Ecosystem Development & Stakeholder Management
Acquisition of new members and partners as well as sustainable onboarding and integration into existing structures
- Conceptualization and implementation of specialist and networking formats
Contribution to and further development of industry-specific events (e.g. DecompileD) as well as the creation of new, innovative exchange formats in collaboration with member companies
- Transparency & Communication
Close collaboration with the communications team to increase visibility of topics, trends, and best practices in the software, IT, and AI environment
- Data-driven network management
Further development of CRM and data landscapes, ensuring high data quality, and creating reports and dashboards to manage and evaluate community activities
- Process and interface optimization
Identifying and implementing efficient workflows to further develop our processes

Your Profile

- Completed degree or comparable qualification in business, computer science, communication, or social sciences
- Solid understanding of the software and IT industry as well as interest in technological and economic policy developments
- Experience in community management, network building, stakeholder management, or comparable interface roles
- Strong ability to connect stakeholders with different interests and bring them into productive collaboration
- Strategic thinking combined with a structured and independent working style
- Confident demeanor, strong communication skills, and enthusiasm for collaborative formats
- Strong passion for networking and connecting diverse stakeholders to create added value
- Proficiency in digital tools, CRM systems, and data analysis tools

What to Expect

You can expect a committed, interdisciplinary team within one of Europe's leading high-tech networks. We offer:

- Creative freedom and responsibility in a forward-looking field
- Flexible working hours and home office options
- Individual adjustment of weekly working hours

- Support for your mobility (bicycle, public transport, car)
- A working environment between urban life and nature (Dresdner Heide)
- An open, collaborative team culture with regular exchange

Interested?

If you would like to actively shape the future of a strong software and IT ecosystem, we look forward to receiving your application.
